Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 55-60 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Corbitt, Jr. et al.

Corbitt, Jr. et al disclose a bioabsorbable breast implant and further disclose an elongate tubular member having a proximal end a distal end and a lumen therebetween; a bioresorbable body contained within the elongate tubular member, the bioresorbable body comprising polylactic acid and polyglycolic acid; a radiopaque marker carried by the bioabsorbable body; the bioresorbable body is remotely visualizable; the radiopaque marker is contained within the bioresorbable body; the bioabsorbable body comprises at least one bioresorbable body; the bioresorbable body swells upon contact with body fluid; and the bioresorbable body swells to substantially fill the biopsy site. See Column 2, lines 41-48 and 66-67; Column 3, lines 1-9, 15-21 and 40-53; and Column 4, lines 5-16 and 31-41.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 61-68 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Foerster et al ('055) in view of Corbitt, Jr. et al.

Foerster et al disclose a device and method for marking biopsy sites and further disclose providing a bioresorbable body having a radiopaque marker carried by the bioresorbable body; removing a biopsy specimen; inserting the bioresorbable body at the biopsy site to mark the location of the site; testing the biopsy specimen; relocating the biopsy site by detecting the radiopaque marker; the bioresorbable body comprises at least one bioresorbable body; the marker is contained within the bioresorbable body; and the radiopaque marker is detected by mammography or ultrasound. See Abstract; Column 7, lines 66-67; Column 8, lines 1-49 and 65-67; Column 9, lines 1-4; Column 12, lines 50-57; and Column 13, lines 30-36.

Foerster et al however fails to explicitly disclose the use of polylactic acid or polyglycolic acid as the bioresorbable materials; the bioresorbable body swells in contact with body fluids; and the bioresorbable body swells to substantially fill the biopsy site.

Corbitt, Jr. et al, as discussed above, disclose a bioresorbable implant placed at a biopsy site and further disclose the use of polylactic acid or polyglycolic acid as the bioresorbable materials; the bioresorbable body swells in contact with body fluids; and the bioresorbable body swells to substantially fill the biopsy site. See Column 2, lines 41-48 and 66-67; Column 3, lines 1-9, 15-21 and 40-53; and Column 4, lines 5-16 and 31-41.

Since both Foerster et al and Corbitt, Jr. et al disclose means for marking biopsy sites using a bioresorbable radiopaque body, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include the particulars of Corbitt, Jr. et al, in particular a swellable bioresorbable body, since it would provide a means of hemostasis as well as a means for marking the biopsy site for future reference while allowing the device to eventually degrade if further procedures are not necessary.

Allowable Subject Matter

5. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: Claims 4-17 and 37-45 remain allowable per the reasons set forth in Paper No. 7.
